

Rev. Floyd Crider founded Galilee CDC based on a vision that he had resulting from a walk through the neighborhood in the late 90s. He was referred to an organization in Houston that was doing something similar. After visiting it, he was determined to do something to provide "decent, affordable housing" to low-moderate income clients. "It's been a long time coming" as the song goes but we knew that a change was going to come. Rev. Crider is a pastor and a high school guidance counselor and is the President of GCDC. He is also involved in many other civic organizations. To see more on him, go to www.floydcrider.com in your search engine.
